About Authors

Address: Neil Dunaetz, 1331 Brooke Way, Gardnerville, NV 89410, USA; email: neilr@sonic.net

Gordon Globus studied psychology at Cornell University, received his MD at Tufts University in 1959, and finished his education working at Harvard Medical School, Boston University Medical Center, and the Boston Psychoanalytic Institute. In 1966 he became assistant professor at the Boston University School of Medicine, and then served as professor of psychiatry and philosophy at the University of California at Irvine (UCI) from 1968 to 1993. He founded and directed the UCI Psychotherapy Clinic (1976-1980) and the University Service at Capistrano by the Sea Hospital (1980-1988). After his retirement he held visiting professorships in Brazil, Denmark, and Russia between 1995 and 1998. Gordon Globus is a Distinguished Life Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association. His recent work explores the role of philosophical views (from Leibniz to postmodernism) on quantum theory for novel approaches to consciousness.

Address: Prof. Dr. Gordon Globus, Medical Plaza at Fashion Island, 360 San Miguel Drive, Suite 503, Newport Beach, CA 92660, USA; email: ggglobus@uci.edu

David Hommen studied philosophy, musicology and media science and received a doctoral degree in philosophy at Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf in 2012. He has been a research fellow in the DFG Research Unit “Causality, Laws, Dispositions, and Explanation at the Intersection of Science and Metaphysics” from 2009 to 2015, working on the causal and explanatory relevance of omissions and negative events. Since 2011, he is a post-doctoral research fellow in the DFG Collaborative Research Centre “The Structure of Representations in Language, Cognition and Science” at Düsseldorf, working on the presuppositions of frame theory in the history of philosophy and on the logic and ontology of the cognitive representation of theories. Since 2012, he is also visiting lecturer at the University
Duisburg-Essen. His research areas include ontology/metaphysics, philosophy of mind, philosophy of science and cognitive science.
Address: Dr. David Hommen, Department of Philosophy, Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf, Universitätsstr. 1, 40225 Düsseldorf, Germany; email: hommen@phil.hhu.de

J. Scott Jordan received a PhD in psychology at Northern Illinois University at Dekalb in 1991. Subsequently he became assistant professor and, in 1995, associate professor of psychology at Saint Xavier University Chicago. From 1998 to 1999 he was a Humboldt Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Psychological Research at Munich, before he moved to Illinois State University at Normal in 2001. There he coordinated the cognitive and behavioral science program of the Department of Psychology in 2003 and 2004 and was appointed a full professorship of psychology in 2006. Since 2008 he directs the Institute for Prospective Cognition at Illinois State University, and since 2009 he is the chair of the psychology department. In his research he explores interdisciplinary approaches to understand the interplay between intentionality, cognition, perception, and action.
Address: Prof. Dr. J. Scott Jordan, Department of Psychology, Illinois State University, Campus Box 4620, Normal IL 61790–4620, USA; email: jsjorda@ilstu.edu

Arkady Plotnitsky earned his MS in mathematics from Leningrad (now St. Petersburg) State University in Russia and his PhD in comparative literature and literary theory from the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. In 1999 he moved to Purdue University (West Lafayette) as the director of the Theory and Cultural Studies Program. Since 2015 he is a Distinguished Professor of English and Theory and Cultural Studies in the Department of English at Purdue University. His primary research interests are in continental philosophy, history and philosophy of mathematics and science, literary criticism and theory, modernity and postmodernity, British and European Romanticism, and the relationships among literature, philosophy, and science.
Address: Prof. Dr. Arkady Plotnitsky, Department of English, Purdue University, West Lafayette, IN 47907, USA; email: plotnits@purdue.edu

Donata Schoeller is an associate professor at the University of Koblenz. She received a PhD in philosophy on the notion of humility and taught at the University of Zurich, ETH Zurich, the University of Chicago and DePaul University. Her Habilitation on “Close Talking: Erleben zu Sprache bringen” is about to appear in summer 2018. Currently, she is the project manager of an international research project on Embodied Critical Thinking, launched by the University of Iceland in cooperation with the University of Aarhus. She is a trainer of first-person practices and methodologies to access tacit dimensions of knowledge and a member of the Micro-Phenomenology Laboratory, Paris.
Address: Dr. Donata Schoeller, Institute of Philosophy, University of Koblenz-Landau, Universitätstrasse 1, 56070 Koblenz, Germany; email: schoeller@uni-koblenz.de

William Seager is a philosopher with a masters degree from the University of Alberta (1976) and a PhD from the University of Toronto (1981). After positions as Assistant Professor at the University of Toronto Scarborough (UTS) and at Erindale College, he was Associate Professor at UTS from 1987 to 1992 and has been Full Professor of Philosophy there since 1992. Besides a number of special topics in the philosophy of science and the philosophy of mind, he is particularly interested in metaphysical questions pertaining to these fields. His work on approaches to consciousness includes the radical idea that mind is a fundamental and ubiquitous feature of the world, known as panpsychism.
Address: Prof. Dr. William Seager, Department of Philosophy, University of Toronto, 170 St. George Street, Toronto ON, Canada M5R 2M8; email: seager@utsc.utoronto.ca